Adequate Yearly Progress

Dear Parents and Community of Glendale Middle School,

Adequate Yearly Progress reporting has been required by the Federal Government's No Child Left Behind Act since 2002-03. The reports are based on several indicators, including Language Arts and Math Criterion Referenced Tests (CRT's) and test participation rates. The reports are categorized by whole school and multiple student groups based on ethnicity and student demographics. There are 40 categories for each school, and a single "No" in any category means the entire school did not make "AYP." These reports are available to the public from the Utah State Office of Education website, Salt Lake District Website, and Glendale School website each year since 2003.

Salt Lake City School District wishes to congratulate the students and teachers of Glendale Middle School for the hard work and dedication to learning that has resulted in making federal Adequate Yearly Progress for the 2010-11 school year. It should be recognized that students made 19% improvement in math over the previous year's results, and 6% increase in Language Arts. Students made improvement not only as an entire school but individual student groups as well. While these reports and additional links to understanding will continue to be posted on the school's website, the district would like to recognize Glendale for academic performance, and appreciates the dedication of teachers and students. In fact, Glendale has made AYP for 6 out of the 8 years that AYP has been in place. Way to go Glendale!
